Total Direct Cost: $12,200,000
Principal Investigators: Lisa A. Cooper, MD, MPH and Jill Marsteller, PhD, MPP
Role: Principal Investigator, 35% effort

This is a pragmatic cluster randomized trial in which we will compare the effectiveness of clinic-based standard of care plus audit, feedback and education (SCP) to an intervention that uses a collaborative care team, a community health worker and specialist consultation to deliver contextualized, appropriately stepped care (CC/stepped care) for reducing disparities and improving patient-centered outcomes among patients with hypertension. Thirty primary care clinics, including Federally Qualified Health Centers, across Maryland will recruit 63 patients each (total=1,890). We will use patient and broad stakeholder engagement and apply principles of community-based participatory research to refine and adapt intervention protocols and materials to the needs of participating organizations, clinic sites, and populations.

Total Direct Costs: $250,000
Co-Principal Investigators: Yvonne Commodore-Mensah, PhD, Fred S. Sarfo, MD, PhD
Role: Co-Investigator, 20% effort

This study seeks to develop an intervention that will improve management of hypertension and reduce socioeconomic disparities in hypertension control in Ghana by enhancing capacity of local healthcare providers and public health personnel to deploy contextually-adapted versions of evidence-based interventions to improve HTN control. We will purposively recruit persons who are socioeconomically disadvantaged, tailor the intervention to patients' identified social needs and barriers to HTN control, and compare outcomes by socioeconomic deprivation levels. Strategic partnerships between study personnel from Johns Hopkins University and collaborating Ghanaian healthcare institutions, as well as local community-based organizations, will be enhanced during this implementation grant. The study will help build the infrastructure and capacity of the collaborating healthcare system to manage non-communicable diseases such as hypertension.

Peer Enhanced Depression Care: Using Peer Mentors to Provide Self-Care Support to Low-Income and Minority Older Adults

Randomized controlled trial of the Peer Enhanced Depression Care program in which peer mentors who have personal experience of depression meet individually with older adults recruited in the community for 8 weekly meetings focused on relief of depressive symptoms through self-care support and linkages to community resources. This group of low-income and minority older adults in the intervention will be compared to a group that receives non-peer visits that provide social interaction. We will also evaluate the implementation of the intervention.

The Evidence-Based Practice Center (EPC) at the Johns Hopkins University Bloomberg School of Public Health developed an evidence report on strategies for improving minority health care quality. We conducted a systematic review and synthesis of the published literature on key issues related to improving the quality of health care for minority populations (including those with limited English proficiency) and the cultural competence of health care providers and organizations. The results of our analyses were subjected to a comprehensive peer review process.

We will use the infrastructure of an existing randomized trial of primary care-based quality improvement interventions for depression to complete the proposed study. The study subjects include 27 primary care providers and 132 African American patients with depression. Our specific aims are to: 1) describe the prevalence and extent of shared decision-making (SDM) communication related to depression in primary care patients using audiotapes of patient enrollment visits; 2) evaluate the construct and concurrent validity of this new measure of SDM communication; and 3) explore whether SDM communication at baseline predicts better processes and outcomes of care over 12 months of follow up. This study will increase understanding of the role of SDM in improving outcomes for patients with depression and in reducing racial disparities in mental health care.

Total Direct Cost: $2,144,451
Principal Investigator: Lisa A. Cooper, MD, MPH
Role: Principal Investigator, 25% effort

The objectives of this study are to recruit primary care physicians and their African-American patients with major depressive disorder (MDD) into a randomized controlled trial in which the effectiveness of a patient-centered depression intervention is compared to a standard quality improvement depression intervention. Processes and outcomes of care will be evaluated at 6 months and 12 months. The main outcomes include remission of depression, depression symptom level, functional status, and adherence to guideline-concordant treatment. The main process measures include patient ratings of care and physicians' attitudes regarding care of depression.

24. 07/06/09-06/30/10, Respect, Trust, and Patient Outcomes in Sickle Cell Disease
R01HL088511
National Institutes of Health, NHLBI
Total direct costs 09/10: $537,504
Principal Investigator: Mary Catherine Beach, MD, MPH
Role: Co-Investigator, 5% effort

The major goals of this project are to evaluate sickle cell disease patients' experiences of respect, trust, communication, adherence to therapy, appropriateness of care, and health outcomes in routine ambulatory care environments.

25. 03/01/06-07/24/11, Patient-Oriented Research in Cardiovascular Health Disparities
National Institutes of Health, NHLBI
5K24HL083113-04
Total Direct Cost: $700,213
Principal Investigator: Lisa A. Cooper, MD, MPH
Role: Principal Investigator, 50% effort

Dr. Cooper's goal is to create a multidisciplinary center devoted to patient-oriented research in cardiovascular disparities. Her objectives are to: 1) amplify her work in understanding the mechanisms of racial disparities and developing patient-centered intervention strategies to overcome them; 2) provide outstanding mentorship for junior clinician investigators in the conduct of rigorous patient-oriented cardiovascular health disparities research; and 3) develop and test novel methods of measuring racial and ethnic discrimination and its impact on cardiovascular healthcare and outcomes.

26. 09/17/07-05/31/12, Institute for Clinical and Translational Science
 National Institutes of Health, NIRR
 1U54RR023561-01A1
 Total direct costs 09/10: $13,576,457
 Principal investigator: Daniel E. Ford, MD, MPH
 Role: Co-Investigator, Faculty Chair of Community Advisory Board, 5% effort

This CTSA grant will support clinical and translational research throughout Johns Hopkins. It includes support for education and training of new translational investigators, facilities in which clinical research can take place and infrastructure support of patient recruitment, bioinformatics, biostatistics and translational core centers.

27. 3/01/09 – 02/28/13, Randomized Trial of CVD Education and Problem-Solving Training in Urban Diabetics
 National Institutes of Health, NHLBI
 R01 HL089751
 Total direct costs 09/10: 445,867
 Principal Investigator: Felicia Hill-Briggs, PhD
 Role: Co-Investigator, 5% effort

The purpose of this study is to test effectiveness (control of blood sugar, blood pressure, lipids) and cost effectiveness of low literacy, content relevant diabetes and CVD-risk patient education materials as a stand-alone intervention, as compared to this enhanced education in combination with group vs. individual problem-solving training with patients with type 2 diabetes and suboptimal disease control.

28. 04/22/13-05/15/15, Improving Health Outcomes – Blood Pressure (IHO-BP)
 American Medical Association
 Total Direct Costs: $525,000
 Principal Investigator/s: Peter Pronovost, MD, MPH and Lisa A. Cooper, MD, MPH
 Role: Principal Investigator, 10% effort

This is a multi-year, multi-million dollar collaborative effort to improve outcomes in CVD and type II diabetes. A key component of this work will be to increase HTN control rates in ambulatory settings. The AMA has teamed up with colleagues at the Johns Hopkins University. We will select six ambulatory medical practices in Chicago and Baltimore to help us develop and test quality improvement interventions for enhancing HTN care and then adapt and spread these interventions to ambulatory practices regionally and nationally.

29. 07/15/2010-03/31/2015, Johns Hopkins Center to Eliminate Cardiovascular Disparities
5P50 HL0105187 (no cost extension to 8/31/16)
National Institutes of Health/NHLBI
Total Direct Cost: $6,407,792
Principal Investigator: Lisa A. Cooper, MD, MPH
Role: Principal Investigator, 20% effort

We will create a multidisciplinary research center to improve cardiovascular outcomes and reduce racial and ethnic disparities in care in Baltimore, MD. The Center includes three intervention studies to improve the identification, treatment, and outcomes of African Americans with hypertension; Administrative, Shared Resources, and Training Cores; and a Community and Provider Advisory Board. Study 1 is a pragmatic clinical trial that examines the implementation of a multi-method quality improvement intervention in 6 community-based primary care practices. Study 2 is a randomized controlled trial (RCT) to test the effectiveness and long-term sustainability of self-management and problem-solving training for patients, family and community members. Study 3 is a 2-arm RCT of culturally-tailored nutritional advice plus a conditional financial supplement. Primary outcomes for the studies are systolic and diastolic BP and BP control.

30. 04/01/15 – 03/31/17, Implementation and Evaluation of an Inpatient Diabetes Superuser Education Program
NIDDK
Total Direct Cost: $150,000
Principal Investigator: Sherita Golden, MD, MHS
Role: Co-Investigator, 5% effort

The goal of this project is to develop a novel diabetes prescriber superuser educational program focused on inpatient diabetes management for physicians, based on their input. I will then examine the impact of the diabetes prescriber superuser program and an analogous diabetes nurse superuser program that is already developed on glycemic control and other outcomes in hospitalized patients with diabetes.

31. 10/1/2013 – 9/30/2016, An Integrative Multilevel Study for Improving Patient-Centered Care Delivery Among Patients with Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease
Patient-Centered Research Outcomes Institute
Total costs: $ $2,099,946
Principal Investigator: Hanan Aboumatar, MD, MPH
Role: Co-Investigator, 1% effort

This study developed and evaluated a comprehensive patient and family-centered transitional care intervention to improve patient-centered outcomes among hospitalized COPD patients.

Extramural Funding, previous

32. 07/26/11-04/30/16, Patient-Oriented Research in Cardiovascular Health Disparities
National Institutes of Health, NHLBI

Total Direct Cost: $700,213
Principal Investigator: Lisa A. Cooper, MD, MPH
Role: Principal Investigator, 30% effort

Dr. Cooper 1) Amplified her work in understanding the mechanisms of racial disparities and testing multi-level interventions that reduce disparities and create models for future interventions; 2) Trained a new generation of scholars who are engaged in research to better understand causes and identify sustainable solutions to CVD disparities; and 3) Began to translate and disseminate evidence generated from her research program into clinical and public health practice and policy.
