

Mark T. Hughes, M.D., M.A., F.A.C.P.
Assistant Professor of Medicine

Mark Hughes is a clinician-educator in the Division of General Internal Medicine at Johns Hopkins and a core faculty member of the Johns Hopkins Berman Institute of Bioethics. He co-chairs the Johns Hopkins Hospital Ethics Committee. His work in research ethics has included serving as a guest observer on the IRB of the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute (NHLBI), serving as the ethics consultant on two different Data Safety and Monitoring Boards at the NHLBI, serving as an alternate member on the JHM IRB, and coordinating educational experiences for IRB members and investigators in the Schools of Public Health, Nursing, and Medicine. In addition to lecturing for the RCTP, Dr. Hughes directs the course REWARDS, Research Ethics Workshops about responsibilities and duties of scientists, aimed at investigators performing human subjects research in the School of Medicine. He is also co-developer and co-director of the course, Introduction to Research Ethics, for graduate students in the School of Medicine.
