Synopsis

Olga Yakusheva, PhD, FAAN(h), is an economist and a Professor of Nursing at the Johns Hopkins University. Furthermore, she holds the position of the Economics Editor for the International Journal of Nursing Studies, the leading international nursing research journal. Dr. Yakusheva has an academic background in applied mathematics (BS) and economics (MS, PhD), specializing in economic theory and methods, and big data analytics. Internationally recognized as an expert on the economic value of nursing and its contribution to patient, societal, and organizational outcomes, Dr. Yakusheva is one of the leading economists influencing national nursing policy. She presently serves as an economic advisor to the ANA Enterprise, the ANA Enterprise Research Council, and The Joint Commission's Nurse Stakeholder Committee. Alongside a longstanding nursing colleague, she co-directs the ANA's new initiative, "Framing and Articulating the Economic Value of the Nursing Profession." This includes leading the upcoming national ANA summit, "Re-imagining the Economic Value of Nursing." Dr. Yakusheva is the lead author on a recent six-part series in Nursing Outlook titled "Value-informed nursing practice and leadership."
